Though they're vastly different artists, the (literal) thread tying Julia Bland and Michelle Segre together is their work with fiber. Bland employs a loom to craft geometric designs that recall quilts or Spirographs, creating large, colorful tableaux. On the other hand, Segre works more fluidly, weaving without tools to create more organic, sculptural pieces that have a totemic quality.

Location: Derek Eller Gallery, 300 Broome Street New York

Price: Free

Time: Opening reception, 6 p.m.–8 p.m.; Wednesday–Sunday, 11 a.m.–6 p.m.
